

Serene Place

Sometimes I get pretty tired when I'm in a place with too much noise and many people. I can't concentrate or rest to prepare for the next class. I just want to close my eyes for a moment. The busy and tiring day-to-day activities make me take advantage of every opportunity I get to rest. At National Chung Hsing University, precisely on the sixth floor of the management building, the corridor of the lecturer room, the business administration department, that's where I sometimes rest. A table and a few chairs will suffice. Sometimes I empty my mind, rest, and be grateful. Sometimes at that desk, I continue my busy life as a student. I prepared some materials that might be discussed in class or my presentation before class started.

Living not close to campus requires me to find another place to rest when I have free time to wait for my next class.

Some people stay away from that place; they said many lecturers often walk back and forth there. But so far, I've never felt the place sucks. Besides being able to stay away from the noise and places full of people passing by, I enjoy my time relaxing there even though I also meet lecturers I know. But I feel safe and calm. The wind that blows shady does not make me hot; I even often feel very cool while enjoying my afternoon there.

Not only the sixth-floor corridor that became my resting place when I was tired on campus. The library is also one of the places where I escape the noise and fatigue after class. I also often prepare myself before taking exams in the library. Many empty chairs can be occupied to rest or study. In addition, the library provides various information, and books, which we can use as references.

For me, good facilities on campus are an important factor that must be given to students. Very happy to have a campus that provides facilities that indirectly support me to be able to study better for me at National Chung Hsing University.
