

TAIWAN – NCHU, WHY NOT?

Nguyen Thi Huong Giang

It has been a year since I came here, a question that I was asked the most is “Why do you come here, why do you choose Taiwan?”

And 3 words that almost became my natural reflex are: "周杰倫 (Jay Chou) ." :))

I remember in my College Chinese class recently, when my teacher required an assignment writing about someone who had great influence on myself, I wrote about Jay Chou without any hesitation.

Jay Chou is the biggest motivation for me to challenge and improve myself. Because of him, I tried my best to learn Chinese by myself (through listening to music =)) and applied scholarship to study in Taiwan. Because of him, I did research about Taiwan from many aspects and know how developed Taiwanese education is, as well as the high quality of life and the good environment is. I hear my heart screaming and longing for studying in Taiwan. Because of him, I have made life-changing decisions that make my life more colorful. Because of him, I had a chance to love this place - NCHU.

Realizing that I am interested in digital marketing, with advertising, with fanpage and many other things, after considering for a time, I decided to apply to some universities in that field. And NCHU is one of my goals when I applied.

When I received the announcement from NCHU, I was really happy but also extremely thrilled with my new life in a completely new foreign country.

Many times, because of the studying pressure is so considerable, I also wondered, in the end whether I have decided right or wrong when choosing this place.

But after one year of bitterness, happiness and sadness, I feel very happy for choosing NCHU. NCHU is located in Taichung City - the central location of Taiwan and it also has the most stable and temperate climate in Taiwan.

Besides, this decision also helped me meet international friends from all over the world, making me familiar with a variety of cultures or extremely kind teachers who helped me from the first day, helping me to overcome the sadness and pressure of studying abroad. I have always felt extremely fortunate to be able to meet them. I remember when I just came here, my language was not good, it was difficult for me to understand lectures in classes, but the teachers always pay attention and care about International students, help and facilitate as much as possible. This is one of the things that makes me love NCHU so much.

In order to gain more experience, practice my Chinese skills, apply what I learned from my Marketing department, I also had part-time jobs during my winter and summer vacation. Part-time jobs help me get to know many Taiwanese colleagues who are both kind and enthusiastic.

Then I realized, I have loved this place ever, loved the school every day that I clip-clop more than a kilometer from the dorm to the faculty, love the milk flowers beside the school, love the friendly people and enthusiasm here.

Thank you for everything. :))
